Frenchman Hijacks Jet To Beirut, Shoots It Up

The dramatic dawn arrival of a Trans-World-Airlines Boeing with nine passengers and 11 crew sent truckloads of armed Lebanese troops and two armored cars racing to the airport, and posed several questions for the authorities.

Was judo expert Christian Rene Belon, the 26-year-old hijacker, working for a Palestine commando group like the Arab girl and man who hijacked another TWA Bosing to Damascus last August and blew np the cockpit on the runway?

Was he, as he claims, a lone-wolf radical, inspired by idealism, or was he just unbalanced, neurotic and seeking publicity? How did he smuggle a rifle as well as two pistols aboard the plane when it touched down at Paris on a flight from Baltimore

And did someone help him get into the Paris departure lounge without going through emigration formalities? There was no exit stamp on his passport, police sources said, and it was believed that he might also have evaded customs to get his rifle aboard the

First interrogation of Belon at the airport, before he was taken to Beirut's Baabda prison, revealed no direct links with the Palestinian commandos.

Police found newspaper photographs of Mao Tse-tung and Syrian chief of staff Mustara Thas on Belon. But he said he was not a Communist and thet, although he sympathized with the commandos, he did not belong to a guerrilla group. After riddling the instrument panel and smashing the copilot's window with rifle shots. Belon handed his personal arsenal to Lebanese security men, declaring, "I did it for Lebanon."

Official sources said he told interrogators, "I could not tolerate" the injustice done to you"-accepted as a reference to last week's raid in which Israel seized 22 Lebanese prisoners in reprisal for the capture of a night watchman by Palestine Judicial sources said after preliminary investigation ended tonight that Belon was charged with hijacking an airliner, threatening people with weapons, and illegal possession of arms. He faces between three and seven years in jail if convicted. No arrest warrant has yet been issued against Belon, however. Capt. Kenneth Marks, the Boeing pilot, told reporters at Beirut airport that, during a refuelling stop at Rome, Belon fired a shot in the forward galley.

"He was getting impatient because we were staying too long at Rome. We wanted to figure out some way of not leaving," the captain said. During the three-hour flight on to Behut, Belon (Continued on Page 2, Col. 6)

Libya: Planes Where There Are No Pilots?

France Confirms A Plan for Selling Libya 50 Mirages

By James Goldsborough

PARIS, Jan. 9.—France tonight agreed to sell at least 50 Mirage jets to Libya and at the same time said that progress was being made in the search for peace in the Middle East.

The double-barreled anouncement by official sources said that 15 of the sophisticated planes would be delivered to the Libyan revolutionary government during 1971 and the remainder over a "long period of time." The anouncement of peace talks progress semeed to be timed to ease the impact of the massive plane sale to the Libyans. At the same time, the government released official figures for arms sales by the other powers to the Arabs during The announcement of the sales caught U.S. officials by surprise. Earlier this week, the French had given the United States assurances that original reports of 50 Mirages destined for Libya were "exagerat-Late tonight American officials had not received official confirmation of the announcement. One American source close to the embassy said that if the reports were confirmed, "then we were misled."

Tonight's announcement confirms original reports two weeks ago that the Libyans were to buy 50 planes. The French never denied the reports, but informed Defense Ministry sources were quoted by the French news agency this week as saying the contract would be for between "ten and 15"

The announcement follows week of assurances hy the U.S. government that the United States was not "concerned" over the imminent sale. U.S. sources said that the French had not given any numbers, but assured that original were inflated.

Desire for Peace

The sale in no way affects the French desire for Middle East peace, the French sources said tonight. The sources said that France would continue to work for peace through the Big Four UN consultations between France, the United States, Russia and Britain. The French said that progress had been made in these talks and that the four were now in agreement on certain essential points. The sources said the French would present a list of these points at (NYT).-Members of the mili-tant Women's Liberation Movement are demanding admittance to the all-male karate classes given by the University of California's physical education department.

Wednesday a groop of 20 or more invaded the men's locker room and yesterday about 35 went to the room where the allmale garate class was in session. They were greeted with sneers, and a few nervous giggles from some of the male students in the locker room. Yesterday they held their ground in the face of threats of

While the fundamental argument is feminine rights, the physical education department was picked for this assault on the ground that it does not offer instruction in karate for women students.

On Wednesday the demonstrators chanted "Defense for Women." Yesterday the chant was "Self-Defense for Women Now." They also threatened. "Open it up or well shut it down."

The demonetrators were mainly attractive girls wearing miniskirts and boots. Most of the men in the locker room they invaded were partially

China Calls Earthquake A 'Disaster'

Relief Work Still Goes On 4 Days After

HONG KONG, Jan. 9 (Reuters). -Chins today called a big earthquake that hit its southern province of Yunnan four days ago a "disaster." Reports from the area said relief operations were still going on.

A Peking radio broadcast did not mention any casualties or list the extent of damage but said troops civilians and party workers were "successfully combating the disaster."

Observers here said official Peking reports seemed to show that damage was more extensive than China's silence had indicated.

France Arms the Arabs

The long-term cause of French-American friendship and the more immediate problem of peace in the Middle East are not well served by the State Department's effort to shrug off reports of substantial French arms sales to Libya.

The French government has now, after sharp denials directed to this newspaper, confirmed in principle a New York Times report last month that France is arranging an arms deal with the new government of Libya. French spokesmen state that the transaction does not involve 50 Mirage jets and 200 tanks, as originally reported. But there is no clear indication that the deal is limited to the mere "ten or fifteen" Mirages mentioned by the French.

If the sale of French military equipment to Libya even approaches the dimensions that have been suggested and acknowledged by some sources in Paris, it could seriously upset the balance of power in the Middle East, That would certainly poison relations between Washington and Paris.

The French argument that their embargo on arms to the Middle East applies only to those nations directly involved in the 1967 Middle East war evades the realities of 1970. The fact is that such rear-area nations as Libya and Iraq to which France also is supplying munitions, are among the most belligerent of the Arab states today. Iraq has troops in Jordan close to the Israeli border and the new military regime in Libya has pledged economic and military support to the Arab struggle against Israel.

Paris does have a point when it argues that "everybody has been selling to everybody" in the Middle East, but not much of a point. The United States and Britain have been pulling ont of Libya since the new military regime took power there last September and have exercised considerable restraint in their arms dealings elsewhere in the area, though perhaps not enough restraint. It is the Russians who have been most recklessly pumping arms into the region, all on the Arab side. If the Western nations cannot stand together in a common policy of forbearance, aimed at maintaining a balance, there is no hope of bringing the Middle East arms race under control.

In addition to seeking new outlets for its arms manufacturers, France no doubt also hopes to gain a larger share in Libya's rich oil deposits as a result of ita favoritism toward the Arabs. That is a shortsighted as well as a cynical goal. The new Middle East conflict invited by France's arms policy could have a disastrous impact on the vital flow of Arab oil to France and all of its European allies.

According to the State Department. the Libyan arms deal will not become a point of contention between President Nixon and President Pompidon when the French leader visits Washington next month. It should Both nations have a vital stake in promoting peace in the Middle East. To achieve this common goal they must agree on common policies to restrict the flow of arms that hastens a new war.—From Friday's

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

A Disease by Any Other Name ...

In deciding last November to renounce biological warfare, President Nixon left beclouded an area of policy which has since become the scene of a sharp bureaucratic skirmish. The area concerns toxins. These are poisons generated by living bacteria. Hence, the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency told a House committee recently, it is "pretty clear" the President meant to ban them as biological agents. Last year, however, the Pentagon reclassified toxins as chemical agents, ostensibly on grounds that they are not, in fact, living bacteria, Hence, declared the Pentagon in its House testimony, they are not under presidential edict. So the argument goes. The military, which reportedly has stored 20,000 botulinum bullets and God knows what other weaponized toxins at Pine Bluff arsenal in Arkansas. wants to retain them. Some nongovernmental critics charge that the President pulled a trick, renouncing the militarily unreliable part of the American biological arsenal while reclassifying the useful part "chemical"

We have no evidence for accusing the President of such duplicity. Rather, we assume the matter was left gray by inadvertence. To be sure, in Mr. Nixon's CBW statement and in the accompanying White House briefing on it, the distinction drawn between biological and chemical agents was that biologicals spread epidemics randomly and chemicals affect only their direct victims. By this standard, most toxins are chemicals. Only a complete cynic, however. can believe that this is the distinction Mr.

Nixon really wanted to draw. The revulsion generally felt against biological warfare arises from the conviction that disease should not be used as a weapon of war. Surely the President did not mean that, while a disease induced by living bacteria is out of bounds, a disease induced by a toxin is acceptable. He can scarcely have renounced typhoid only to embrace botulism. Finding itself seized of this issue, the administration may choose to extract some tactical advantage from it—by trading off toxins for tear gases and chemical defoliants. That is, it may conspicuously abandon its claim to toxins in order to mollify the considerable congressional and public opposition to the tear gases and defoliants used in Vietnam. This issue is likely to come to a boil in forthcoming Senate hearings on the Geneva Protocol. The protocol commits briskly weished on the commitsigners not to use chemical or biological agents first in war and the President has asked the Senate to ratify it, He has specified, however, that in his reading the protocol for himself in the Middle East. The does not cover the widely used tear gases aim was simply to reach agreement

Our own view is that these agents are an Soviet influence to the maximum-Integral part of the Vietnam war; that the United States with the Israelis repugnant as they are, the President is not likely to stop using them while American troops are still fighting in Vietnam and that the important consideration is to avoid the kind of situation where the pressures for their use-become so strong. Regardless of that, botulism and the other diseases induced by toxins admit of no similar ambigulty and dispute. They must be banned.

Italian Lullaby

In spite of a certain relaxation of tension in Italy at the beginning of this year, the crisis caused by the prolonged wave of strikes, social unrest and bomb explosions is far from being solved.

At first there were hopeful signs that the bomb outrages would shock the leaders of the four main non-Communist parties into quickly reviving their center-left coalition. thus putting an end to five disastrous months of weak rule by a minority Christian Democratic government.

Bot it is already becoming evident that the politicians are again being julled into a false sense of security as the danger of extremist political action has receded.

Nuclear Imbalance

Defense Secretary Melvin Laird's statement that America may have to build new nuclear missile weapons if the Russians continue to deploy their giant SS-9 missiles at the present accelerated rate, and if no progress is made at the strategic arms limitation talks (SALT), is one of the most serious developments in this field for a long time. The nuclear balance between America and Russia is in danger of tilting heavily in Russia's favor.

It is highly improbable . . . that America would ever undertake a first strike against Russia, bot by no means inconceivable that Russia might make one against America if the Kremlin calculated that retaliation would be impossible or so low as to be acceptable.

If the SALT conference, which resumes in April, can bring some order into this nightmare scene, well and good. But whether it does or not, European countries, incloding Britain, will increasingly become hostages. To avoid this, Western Europe needs its own

If the outsider purges himself of romanticism and admits the inevitability of change, he can still rightly hope that the corrupting effects will be limited. For in Africa, as in Tahiti, the sudden descent of Western wealth into the simple society can destroy a culture without providing a substitute, turning people to degrading envy and servility.

Any country dependent on tourism risks that kind of corruption. Build a giant hotel in the bush, with a bar in the middle of its swimming pool, and imagine the effect on the tribesmen trying to live on a few goats or cows or

Characteristically, the rarest lot in the sale consists of a Renaissance set of scissors, scraper and points, each topped by small statues, monumental in feeling but tiny in actual size; the overall height barely exceeds 4 inches. The pieces bear the arms of Diane de France, Henri II's illegiti-mate daughter. While the handles are made of engraved silver, the steel parts are parcel-gilt. No one but a collector with 50 years' training and an almost perfect knowledge of heraldry could have spotted such a microscopic masterpiece. This one feature of Mr. Haumont's collection implies years, spent poring over obscure documents

A Devouring Curiosity

This summary of Mr. Haumont's life may convey the image a drah existence devoted to administrative tasks. But it tells thing of the other side of his nature: the almost monomentac here thing of the other side of his nature. The most fantastic store has encyclopedic knowledge. Even more surprising is Georges Haumont's success when he ayed far away from his own familiar European shores. He ed his hand at Chinese art, of all things, and got hold of the memarkable Tang horse. ORDON, Jan 8 .- January, traditionally a quiet month in the art market, got off to an early start this year with a picture to at Bonham's on New Year's Day. Although not an important e. It was surprisingly well attended and produced a comfortable 1,908 (307, 523). This illustrates a growing tendency among andm auctioneers, particularly the smaller houses, to disregard 18 30-called seasonal fluctuations in attendance and price, resulting good siles taking place earlier than usual. This means it is no longer as easy as it was to pick up bar-sing at the first and last sales of the season. They are almost ways packed with dealers hurriedly re-stocking after a good year, lich is certainly the case at the moment. Sotheby's first sale like year, last Wednesday, of mixed 18th and 18th-century English paintings, netted £24,560 ($58,944), a good total for a "medium" la confirming the present buoyancy of the picture market.

Sporting pictures attracted good prices in spite of rumors that the bottom was falling out of the market. London's top dealers sporting pictures; Arthur Ackermann & Sons, said that the arket is perfectly stable, and attributed the recent scare to over-stimistic reserves being placed on medicore pictures, which sub-quently had to be bought in pausing unnecessary alarm. The termann from is obviously unpersurbed and thought nothing giving 61,000 for a set of four pictures in the style of Henry ten at Sothery's on Wednesday. A rather unexciting horse trait of "Eardinand, A Bay Huntet," signed and dated 1800 by in Nott Serierius, was also bought by Ackermann for £350 040). A Visionary Look at the World

By Max Wykes-Joyce

LONDON, Jan. 9.—In the spring of 1967 a young artist named Diana Loewenstein finally died of the cancer which deprived her first of the use of her hands then of her sight, then of her memory. After her death, as he tells in 2 most moving book "A Time To Love ... A Time to Die ... " her husband discovered in her studio a great mass of work, much of it delicate, visionary and serene, and some notebooks, full of tiny sketches and meditations on life and death, with a strong hiss to the Zen mas-Under the title of "The Visionary World of Diana Loewenstein." a large memorial exhibition of her work is now to be seen at the Upper Grosvenor Galleries, 19 Upper Grosvenor Street. Apart from a few large flower panels, she worked always on a very small scale... the most interesting being two series, the first of stylized flow-ers, in which the artist seems to have invented for herself a fresh race of blossoms; and the other series, entitled "Besic Structures of Nature," which were painted in the last active years of her life. These explore in a minute and peculiarly acute manner the relationships between the drop and the ocean, the crystal and the great globe itself, the passing cloud and the everlesting hills.

One is inevitably reminded by these remarkable paintings of the Oriental masters of a distant past: The whole spirit of such art is that of suggestion and half-hint; of the everchanging color and pattern of the world without, imposed upon the changelessness of the world within.

Each year Arthur Tooth and Sons, 31 Bruton Street, makes an accrochage of good French figuration under the title "Le Tour des Ateliers." This year's show, running through Jan. 24 includes Venard, Dureuil, Tail-leux, P. Roussel, Muhl, Cavailles Brianchon, Ganna, Priking, Clavé. Pignon and Circe. For the record, it must be said that there is little wildly exciting quality here. But on the other hand, the general standard is of considerable competence and some decorative merit. To my view, the most interesting among the dozen artists are: Tailleux, with his fresh open landscapes; Muhl, especially in the most recent of his works, and Brianchon, who sweeps across large masses of canvas in a most masterly

Under the blanket, and mexplicable, title of "The Possessors" the young Welsh artist Paul Roberts is holding his first one-man show at the Clytte Jessop Gallery, 271 King's Road Chelsea. The general idea would seem to be to portray a number of affinent persons at work or at leisure among their possessions, which are sometimes objects and sometimes other people; the word probably bears undertones also of demonize possession. Unfortunately. the technique of the artist does not always match up to this grandiose concept; and indeed. when the idea is least in evidence, and Roberts is purely painting, he produces the best works in the show. He is, however, a very young man: and has, one would suppose, a good deal of latent talent.

It has frequently puzzled me wby more artists do not allow themselves the pleasure of intimists painting of the type of which Bonnard and Vuillard were the masters. A young disciple of Bonnard has appeared in the person of Charlotte Ardizzone, showing at the Drian Galleries, 5/7 Porchester Place, through Jan. 30. There is nothing complex or difficult about these bright paintings of people wrapping up presents, people round a table enjoying melon and cold chicken, people in truth living quiet, comfortable and happy lives. One delights as much in looking at them as the artist manifestly did in painting them.

TOCKHOLM, Jan. 9.—Two O critical views of the American way of life come from Edward Kienholz, an American. "moralist" artist and the other by John E. Franzen, a young Swedish painter, recently re-turned from the United States.

Kienholz, 42, was born in Fairfield, Wash, and has settled in Los Angeles. His oneman show of 11 "tableaux." with another 11 in embryo, will open at the Modern Museum here on Jan. 17. The exhibition will continue on tour to Amsterdam, Dusseldorf, Paris, London, Bern, and possibly Tokyo, before winding up in Berkeley. Calif. This is the first time that Klenholz has gathered all his "tableaux"—the work of ten years—under one roof.

The "tableaux" are three-dimensional. They consist of an assemblage of furnishings and puppets, or "dolls," and are to be displayed in separate rooms of the museum. The para-phernalia arrived here in 45 crates, supplemented by local acquisition of furniture to save freight.

Kienholz's puppets are cast from live models, and metal skeletons have been built by the artist, covered with a plastic fiber and clothed but they are faceless

Kienholz speaks, through his art, for a rebellious American youth. He is a crusader against the present norms of society and an opponent of wars and, in particular, the Vietnam war. His morbid "tableaux" deal with sex, time, war, and death.

But he has an original point of view. He invites what he calls "viewer participation." He wants the public to walk right into his "tableaux," sit down and "look, listen and smell."

"In the past," he says, "people have been used to looking at paintings, hanging on walls, at a distance to get the right perspective. I want them to come right into the picture and become a part of it, so they get

If his pictures are critical of American society, he says it is because his horizon has been limited to a corner of the United States. But hypocrisy. Kienholz maintains, is universal and his "tableaux" could as well apply to human behavior as a whole.

He calls his favorite "ta-"The Portable War bleau Memorial." To the left of the set is a shiny, silvery puppet, representing Kate Smith and, in the foreground, a reproduction of the famous scene of the raising of the U.S. flag by the Marines at Iwo Jima in World War II. A black tombstone lists the names of 500 countries, or territories, which Kienholz claims, have been involved in wars at one time or another in history. This half of the "tableau," according to Kienholz, is "war propaganda." And on the right is reality, what he calls "business as usual"-a bar "profiting by war," backed with another tombstone but blank for the names of the victims of

to give birth to a child, with plastic arrows emanating from her body, depicting her pains; "The Best Dodge," an old car with a couple making love in the rumble seat, is Kienholz's protest against the conventions of society which, he says, have driven them to "this guilty and dirty experience which is far from satisfactory."

The public may react very differently. But Keinholz says they have to reach their own conclusions.

A more critical view of the American scene comes from the 27-year-old Swedish artist, John E. Franzen, whose large oil painting entitled "Hell's Angels. California, U.S.A. 1965-69" . Was shown at the Royal Academy of Art over the year-end. Franzen was a graduate of the Academy and is considered one of Sweden's more promising younger artists.

It took him three years, two of which he spent on the Ameri-

Frangen's picture shows a gang, cleaning up after a "party." They are sorting out the rubbish including broken bottles and empty cans, ignoring a lightly clad girl, lying unconscious and bleeding in the foreground, while another seminude girl is running from the

Yet you may find that you are actually losing ground doe to inflation, taxes or lack of time for investment decisions. To help solve this problem, clients in 55 countries have turned to The Danforth Associates Investment Management Plan. It has, we believe, proved especially efficient in providing continuing capital growth supervision for portfolios of from $5,000 to $50,000—on behalf of people who recognize and can share the risks and rewards of common stock

If the money you have today is to grow in the future toward. more income, or for education, travel, leisure, retirement, it must be kept working full time to achieve your goals.

investments. The cost is modest, as low as $100 per year. For a complimentary copy of a 42 page report describing this tested plan, its complete 10-year "performance record," and how it may help you now, simply write Dept. E-38

Eastern Europe Seeks Greater Role in Trade

1970: Turnaround in U.S.-European Relations?

BONN (WF) -Call it convergence, or thaw, or simply pragmatism, Eastern Europe is training toward an era of unprecedented trade with the West as it enters the 1970s.

In almost every field-technical, scientific, consumer goods, even raw materials—the Communist governments are seeking more exchange and cooperation with the West, particularly

In retrospect, the Comecon (Communist Common Market) summit meeting early in 1969 may have been as significant in the economic sphere as some of the political summits that followed, for it gave the go-ahead for an era of trade deals with the West that is virtually certain to influence the whole East-West dialogue.

In December, the Soviet Union agreed to provide the West Germans with 8 hillion cubic meters of natural gas a year by 1977, in return for more than one million tens of pipeline from the West Germans, at a price to be worked out.

.. Mercedes and Volkswagen are sniffing the winds to see if they can get into the promising Soviet car market in competition with Fiat, which got there first.

Meanwhile, the other East European capitals are determined to follow the Soviet example. This is what the Polish-West German trade negotiations, which started in late 1969. are all about. Although rumours of credits of some half billion dollars from the Germans are stoutly denied, there is no doubt that Bonn is prepared to encourage the new tendencies

Next year, Hungary will start trade negotiations in Bonn and talks will also commence with the Romanians aimed at new credits and at refinancing Bucharest's debt to Bonn.

There are complex combinations of factors at play in the Eastern turn to the West. Most important, it has become obvious to even the most orthodox planners that Moscow can no longer supply sufficient investment capital for a spurt into the 1970s. Both Poland and Czechoslovakia have been disappointed this year in their efforts to accounge hard cturency credits from the Kremlin to buy the Western technology they

The huge Soviet market for low quality goods was a blessing for the East Europeans during the period of industrialization in the 1950s, and even the 1960s. But it has become clear to the new technocrats and pragmatists in the East that if they are to have access to the technology of the 1970s, some way must be found to develop quality products for which the West is willing to pay in freely convertible currencles.

These pragmatists can also be expected to demand more play for market forces. By definition that means giving not freer hand to negotiate directly with firms in the West.

At the root of the Communist moves toward West Germany and West Europe there may also be concern that the Common Market is heading for a revival, and that its extension, with England, could tend to discourage growth in trade with the East. Indeed East Europeans have rejected this polarization in resisting further "integration" in Comecon.

And in some respects the Soviet Union now has no choice but to give its allies more freedom in dealing with the West.

Moscow has already told its partners, for example that it can not go on filling their oil needs. Estimates are that by 1980 Eastern Europe will have to import 100 million tons of crude oil a year from non-Communist sources.

Year-End Aberrations Noted

Subtle Easing Seen in Fed Credit Restraint

By H. Erich Heinemann NEW YORK, Jan 9 (NYT).-Hints of a subtle easing in the Federal Reserve System's program of monetary restraint were all York City banks dropped by a lits effect. Mr. Oisen said, "is around last week. But it would record $852 million; in Chicago, becoming more and more pervatake a brave analyst to predict business borrowings were down sive." that credit policy had, in fact, changed.

The mometary base, a key indicator of the central bank's actions, continued to show a rate of growth substantially above that which has been characteristic since the last tightening of credit policy

Net borrowed reserves, a widely followed but highly erratic and sometime meaningless measure, were estimated to have averaged $648 million a day, while the borrowings of commercial banks from the reserve system averaged $854 million.

Both averages were well under the levels that have been typical recently.

Even in less technologically important fields, national governments now are aware of foreign takeover dangers. For example, a Dutch firm is trying to buy out the higgest paint company in France, where the $500 million-e-year business is split among 346 firms. The French ministry has refused past American offers and the Dutch project may yet be vetoed as well.

Despite such protection, analysis expect the Europeans in the seventies to carry out an increasingly important invasion of the U.S. market.

Just as U.S. firms felt they couldn't pass up a foothold m the European market in the past decade, so European firms feel they cannot afford to miss out on the U.S. market now. Officially, the U.S. govern-ment favors, and even encourages, these endeavors. Some of the official blessing is explicable in terms of reducing the U.S. balance-of-payments deficit, which seems to have become a semipermanent part of the world monetary scene.

But there are skeptics who believe that the trust busters' original reluctance to let British Petroleum acquire control of Standard Of of Obio is a harhinger of things to come no matter what Washington says to the contrary.

For the record, however, such fears seem unjustified when the $64 billion U.S. stake in Western Europe is compared with the relatively meager $11 billion Europeans have invested in the First Test Production

LIVING POOR: A PEACE CORPS CHRONICE By Morita Thomsen, University of Washington Press. 314

Reviewed by John Rothschild

FOR THE U.S. reading public. I the Peace Corps was a lit-erary as well as a technological expectation-that sending sensitive college graduates with degrees in English literature to live for two years in places that Joseph Conrad couldn't even have dreamed up would produce masterpieces in human insight and contribute significantly to man's verbiage about himself. If the organization has falled us technically in not creating enough bridges and chicken coops to justify the annual $100 million of taxpayers' money. It has had no less dismal a career in the literary realm. The choices in writing "the Peace Corps book" are polariz-ed by the extreme contradictions in our ideas about wint It means to be poor. The poor are savage and underdeveloped but they are also pure and dignified, not tainted with the moral guilt of the rich. They are dangerously dissatisfied and at the same time they are lulling-ly tranquil. Those who work with the poor are heroes or exploiters, and the positions a Peace Corps veteran can safely take are rejecting the Third World, or going native.

In this setting, Moritz Thomsen's "Living Poor" comes on like real talking in a room full of stutterers. It may not contain the profundity to win any national book awards, but for any volunteer who has tried to write Mom about the Pcople, it is a kind of verbal salvation. In the future, volunteers can just mail out chapters of the book, and sign "love" at the "Living Poor" Is about Rio Verde, a small fishing village on Ecuador's northern Pacific coast, but it is not too much about Rio Verde. Thomsen does take something from Oscar Lewis, but the reader is aware of something more than a Lewis tape recorder. There is a man there, sitting at a table in the spasmic brightness of a kerosene lamp, kicking the chickens away from his feet, agonizing about how he fits into this swirling poverty around him. It is also a book about the Peace Corps, but not so much that the reader needs a bureaucratic translator.

Thomsen should get an award for being the only volunteer who has ever written 300 pages without mentioning "host country national" even once. Most important, the book is about Moritz Thomsen, who knows what Norman of Aquarius knew about the Moon Shot—that he is an alien in a strange, other world and must record his reactions as well as his observations. Fortunately, Thomsen lacks the overblown aspects of Mailer's accounts. He is more important than Rio Verde itself.

Principally a compilation of articles published over the last four years in the San Francisco Chronicle (Thomsen was a volunteer for that amount of time). "Living Poor" is powerful for its overwhelming honesty. Thomsen admits his love for the town (a very Peace Corps thing to do) but also admits his hate, disdain, and callousness towards it, something which in Peace Corps circles is roughly equal to admitting to

Stokely Carinkhael that so Negroes do smell bad. He 4 many of the town's customs ridiculous, but does not for to turn his sarcasm inward mocking the absurdity of a ! gringo trying to convince p natives to join cooperate grow corn in the dry sea and cut over-sized radiaties, of which would be grounds Rio Verdeuns to send one their own to a crazy house Thomsen is not a us

Peace Corps volunteer, wh is perhaps why he wrote tunusum Peace Corps book less-than-successful farmer b self (pigs, California), when joined the organization beaiready 48, divorced, and satisfied. But like most wi teers, Thomsen is a mission at the beginning and the development with a fangle fervor. At the end, then enough of him left to an enough of him left t the results—disappointing sults that made Thomsen the townspeople, almost lieve that maybe God did !a hex on all of them. For those who believe development stories, like stories, should have happy ings. Thomsen's book will a disappointment. There is rainbow over the far hor no pot of gold across the Verde, no line of latring tering in the distance. people are still hopelessly demourished and haunter dreams. They still take their frustrations among t selves, and the sound of. machete pounding the ga before the fight is more quent than the sound of operative members gleefully cussing how they can well gether for progress. Bables die, the sea still washes corn crops, and the most i dant harvest is of amochastomach parasites. Thomsen has taken a out of the fiber of this t but he has not turned his on his source. After return to the U.S. to participate the training of some new unteers, he has gone bec Ecuador, where he will b farm not too far from Verde.

With profits he hopes to from his book. Thomsen provide land for the more bitious members of the Verde cooperative.

"Living Poor." If it suct will help people to live poor, which may be wha velopment is all about. T sen will not, incidentally, corn and raise chickens, is what he tried to tell the Verde people to do. He concentrate on coconuts, wi much greater profit-msi which proves that which like poor people, can smeti be flexible enough to leave ways of developing. "Living Poor" is a well-ten book for a U.S. audie All in all, it conveys a t sense of Rlo Verde: imm but deified, underfed but cous, comic but death-hopeful but hopeless, en but satisfied.

The reviewer is a Peace C. volunteer in Ecuador. His ticles have appeared in wh publications, including Washington Post, for which wrote this review.

Raider Cornerback Got Threat on Life

OARLAND, Calif., Jan. 9 (AP) - Oakland Raider cornerback Neimiah Wilson had threats made against his life shortly before the Raiders played in the American Football League title game here last Sunday, the Oakland ne reported today.

Tribune sports editor George Ross wrote from New Oricans that Raider officials confirmed that Wilson and his wife had received two threatening phone calls two days before Oakland lost the title to the Kansas City-Chiefs, if the Raiders won the game. He tald Oak-land coach John Madden about the incident the following day and a special grand was bired to protect his wife on Saturday eyening while Wilson stayed with the fearer at a motel hear the Oakland Collseum.

Raider officials said Wilson fended to pass off the incident as a prank. Nothing further was heard after the thrests Friday night. Wilson is reportedly visiting relatives in Texas and Louisiana and was not immediately

The Vikings are either 12 or 13point favorites, depending on whether the odds emanate from Las Vegas or Minneapolis, but those who go with the betting favorite have learned to regard this fourth Super Bowl game a bit more gingerly than the last three.

The Super Bowl, always supposed to be a romp for the NFL champion, is still suffering from a yearold hangover due to putting too much faith in the Baltimore Colts last January. The New York Jets did more than lick the 17-point favorite Colts. Their breakthrough unmasked the haughty NFL as just another football league like

1-Pt. Win Would Make Vike Coach 'Delirious'

By William N. Wallace

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 9 (NYT).—Although his team is favored by 13 points, coach Bud Grant of the Minnesota Vikings predicted vesterday that Sunday's Super Bowl game here between the Minnesots club and the Kansas City Chiefs would be close. "Neither team is going to get knocked out of the hell park." said the 42-year-old white-haired, hlue-eyed Grant. "Also, I expect a low-scoring game."

Grant brushed aside a suggestion that the Vikings might wish to run up a score on the Chiefs, the American Pootball League champions, to "revenge" last year's victory by the New York Jets, the AFL title team, over Beltimore, the National League entry.

He said he would be "delirious" with a one-point victory.

Although it would be politic for Grant to envision a close exciting game, this man has convictions behind his opinions. He minimized the probable loss through injury of Johnny Robinson, the seasoned Kansas City safety. "All teams who come this far have good depth," he reasoned. Similarly, he said the Vikings lost their regular cornerback, Bobby Bryant, but replaced

Confused R.C.

Many analysts foresee the passes of Joe Kapp, Grant's quarterback, destroying a confused Kansas City secondary playing with Willie Mitchell in place of Robinson and this is the reasoning behind the 13-point-favorite role.

But Grant is dublous. "Nobody here sets the point line," he said as he addressed a group of sports writers at the Hilton Inn Motel, the Viking headquarters near the airport. In adjoining rooms the players were meeting with assistant coachs.

The weather remained cold, 35 degrees, which Grant saw as no advantage for the Vikings, who came out of the frozen North "After what we've been through the past three weeks," he said

we wouldn't complain if it was 75 degrees."

Not only will the Vikings be ready for the Chiefs but also for the National Anthem. Grady Alderman, the only Viring player remaining from the stocking pool that got the expansion transfer going in 1961, disclosed the squad had had National Anthem drills. We let Milt Sunde run them," said Alderman, "He's s sergeant in the National Guard." Sunde, the right guard, taught the players how to line up evenly on the field, to stand at attention

"Most of the credit for this team's development abould go to two men: our general manager, Jim Pinks, who coordinates everything, and Bud Grant, who has done a tremendous job. This year our players have this '40 for 60' slogan, and our success has come from the coordination of these fellows rather than individual standom."

"We would be glad if we could say the waxing was wrong, but it was not," Kiki Cutter from Bend, Ore., said. "It looks as if we had taken not the shortest but the safest line to the finish."

Marilyn Cochran from Richmond Vt., missed one of the 34 control gates and finished standing upright in a poor time.

In the combined standings, which include the special slalom won by Michele Jacot yesterday, Florence Steurer was second and third was Betsy Clifford from Canada, who was tenth in today'e downhill.

WASHINGTON -Every year I find in my basket column notes I never got around to discussing. So I shall use them up and start the new decade with B clean "in-basket."

A suggestion has been made as to how we could finance our space program _

The larger contributors, such as those who bought a galaxy, would be given a dinner by President Nixon at the White House at which time the President would officially change the name of the galaxy and give the donor an autographed map of the universe.

It took months of effort, but someone has finally broken the eode of the high U.S. govern-ment executive when he is com-municating with someone else. Many mothers have written asking how they can get their sons to cut their hair. There is nothing they can do. but President Nixon could do some-thing. If he and Vice-President Spiro Agnew let their hair grow long for three months, everyone in the United States under 30 would immediately head for the nearest barber shop.

I know this is a big sacrifice for the President and Vice-President to make, but it could bring all of Middle America closer together.

PO Says OASD, PA Went AWOL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9 (WP),-Besides being tough to procounce a post office in Pennsylvania decided this week, Camp OASD had closed a year and a half sgo.

So all the manila envelopes that scemed to be addressed to it were sent back to the Department of Defense, where embarrassed personnel to the National Guard Bureau acknowledged yesterday that the envelopes, containing the National Guard's aonual report and intended for oewsmeo in the Pentagoo press room, had mistakenly been dropped into the mail.

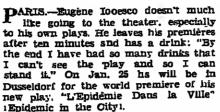

Each was addressed to a reporter, care of "press desk, OASD, PA"-military acronym for Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense, Public Affairs.

To the post office, "PA," even without zip code is Pennsylvania. But OASD? "Return to writer," the eovelopes were stamped by the Middletown, Pa., post office. "Base Closed,

Eugène Ionesco:

"A work is not a series of answers, it is a series of questions ... It is not the answer that enlightens, but the question."

-From "Decounertes,"

Epidemic in the City!.

Three days before this major event. Mr. Ionesco will be involved in a minor event that will undoubtedly get more attention than his play: an election at the Academic Française. Would-be mem-bers nominate themselves, and the candidates for the seat held by the late Jean Paulhan are writers Jules Roy, Christian Murclaux and Eugène Ionesco.

The winner will have received at least 20 votes cast by 39 members of pale distinction. He will participate in the centuries-long task of writing a dictionary of the French language the academi-cians have got all the way to the letter C), and will wear a sword, a cocked hat and the famous habit vert, which is in fact midnight blue or hisck.
Why Eugène Ionesco should seek to be a part of this aged, if decorative, institutioo is a mystery that quite properly. he refuses to clarify before the election. He says he has never received a medal or an official honor; he does not dismiss houors as unimportant.

"One may scorn success," he says, "but one would miss it. Being talked about is a bad hablt one picks up. Anonymity is depressing, so is fame."

Eugène Ionesco lives in Montparnasse. oear the Coupole. Like him, his wife is Romanian-born and they have a grown daughter. Their living room is smallish and very tidy, with New Year's cards on every flat surface, lots of small objects. and Miros, Miros on the wall, Symbol searchers could find references to Ionesco plays in the bowl of marble eggs, the statue of a rhinoceres, and the fact that the room seems to have too many chairs.

Mr. Ionesco, wearing a gray suit and a gray-checked shirt over a T-shirt, emerges timidly and disappears at once to take a providential telephooe call from Switzerland. More disappearances, then he fid-dles with the living-room lamps, which unaccountably refuse to work. Finally he gets one to cast a beam, like a spot-light in a high-school Nativity play, on his guest, and after a final search for his cigarettes (which turn out to have been in his pocket all along! he settles into a chair. He is most pollte and at first, so ill at ease that one thinks the whole room might tilt over. He has described himself at the age of two as round-faced, round-nosed, roundeyed. He still is, and the surprised eyes reflect the sense of wonder that he feels is a basic element in his life:

"Not to understand, to be stupefiedthis is the closest one can come to understanding the un-understandable." he has written. "I think it is this faculty of astonishment that has made me a writer and has made me unfit for all other

With the eternal sense of stupefaction comes a sense of menace. The eves are round with wonder, but drawn down nt the lower outside edge, as if by anxiety. Be has written a book, just published by Skira, called "Decouvertes." which is a sort of Biographia Literaria with a fine section on childhood perceptions and creation, sharp arguments against critics, litterateurs and Brecht, and with a bonus item: cunningly childish crayon drawings and watercolors by Ionesco.

He is preparing another play the does not plan to use his alter-ego. Berenger, ever again—Berenger has already died four or five times, let him rest in peace"). Next fall he will act in "Ia Vase," a film he has written for German TV.

This will be his first film since a script about Wrath for a movie on the Seven Deadly Sins the would have preferred Gluttooy or Lust, but they were already taken). Not writing, he says, is more exhausting than writing.

The first Ionesco play was "La Cantatrice Chanve." produced in 1950, when Iooesco was 38. It was such a flop that to console him the director, Nicolas Bataille, gave him an acting part in a stage version of Dostoevski's "The Possessed." "La Cantatrice Chauve" later reopened and has run to packed Paris houses since 1957.

"I don't understand success or failure," Mr. Ionesco says. "In any case, neither one is important. The failure of a play is most often due to a misunderstanding. So is its success.

"A play is like a building yoo have made. Sometimes people want to enter it, sometimes they don't.

"I feel that if a play expresses my moi, it will express the moi of others. The more private you are the more universal. Gide said that, not I." No contemporary French playwright is as well known or as frequently perform-ed abroad as Ionesco. He has been much written about and is irritated that books about him outsell his own books. "People are always asking What did you want to say when you said . .?'

Soon they'll be asking 'What did you want to say when you said what you wanted to say when you said . . .?"

In his book "Decouvertes," Ionesco uses what critics are not to describe what creators are. In life, he says, critics have never hurt him, but they have bored and annoyed him: "The French critic uses a play as a vehicle to discuss his own

"The critics had trouble accepting me. Once they'd accepted me and I changed. they were angry because they had to start all over again. But if I had continued in the same style they would have said I was repeating myself.

"Critics in the beginning said I had no ideas. Later they said I had too many ideas. They wanted a message, but I gave the wrong one,"

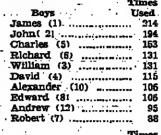

Critics have called Mr. Iooesco a paranolac, a natural mystic, a deliberate primitive nnd-despite the fact that he has lived most of his life in France and has taught literature in a French school _a Romanian. Mr. Ionesco cannot see what being born in Romania has to do with anything. Perhaps, it was suggested, critics say that to excuse the fact that your plays baffle "I don't think so," Mr. Ionesco answered. "The Romanians don't understand my plays either."

Every Tom, Dick & Harry PEOPLE: Is Being Called James

James and Jane, were the top. names for top British children in 1969, the country's top name counter reported yesterday. John held on in second place for the boys. Mary and Ediza-heth shared second place for the girls. Rachel made a spectacular entry to the top ten from 29th position in 1968, John W. Leaver reported these find-ings in a letter to the Times of London as he has done for the past 20 years or more. He compiles his charts from the announcements in the births column of the Times, which advertises itself as the top people's paper.

During 1969 parents chose ths Times to announce 6,359 newcomers, 3,310 of them boys. 3,047 girls. Here are the ten most popular names in each category with the 1968 position in brackets:

Girls Jane (I: Elizabeth (5) 126 Mary (2) 126 Ann (el (4) 108 Sarah (6) Clare (8) Emma (7) Lucy (9) Rachel (29)

When first names only are considered James still tops the list, as he has done for the past six years, Mr. Leaver reported. But Jane drops right out of the top ten. She gets her overall popularity through spin-off from the current British fashion for calling little girls Sarah Jane, Emma Jane, Mary Jane, etc.

Fred W. Demara, the "Great Impostor", has at various times been a Trappist monk, a doctor of philosophy, an emineot zoologist, surgeon and assistant prison warden. Once he performed an appendectomy aboard a Canadian corvette off Korea in a raging storm. He was subject of a best-selling book and a 1961 movie starring Tony Curtis, Now, as Fred W. Demara, D.D., he has turned up as pastor of the San Juan Baptist Church on Friday Island in Puget Sound northwest of Seattle. Gale Shinn, chairman of the pulpit committee which.

selected Demara, answers all questions with "no comment." Meanwhile, Demara preaches The Word on Sundays and leads prayer services oo Wednesday evenings.

Carl Dean Wilson, a member of "the Beach Boys" singing group, will be sentenced Jan. 29 for failure to report for a civilian work assignment as an alternative to military service.

A jury deliberated 30 minutes Thursday before finding Wilson, 22, guilty.

Jack E. Leonard, the rotund insult comedian, married a woman 26 years his junior Thursday.

Leonard, 58, and Gladys Ester Westling, 32, whom he met in an art gallery six months ago, were married in a brief candlelight ceremony at a chapel on the grounds of Las Vegas's Frontier Hotel. 'My bride is 26 years younger than me, and I hope to God I may have tha strength to catch up at my age," Leonard said.

At Toledo, Ohio, a young lady identified only as Janet X, won $45 for being the first woman to appear at a radio station in a bikini in sub-zero weather. The station offered the prize to the first woman to appear at the station in a bikini after the mercury had plunged to six degrees below zero. Janet was shopping when she heard the announcement, ran home to scissors, cut the middle out of the suit, and collected the $45.
